

Leila Afas

Ms. Afas is the Director, International Public Policy at Toyota Motor North America where she manages a global portfolio of policies that directly impact Toyota's business operations, as she has nearly 20 years' experience in international trade and investment, government relations and strategic communications. Ms. Afas also coordinates external affairs with colleagues around the world to develop and implement strategies advancing the company's market access and regulatory priorities. Prior to joining Toyota, she served as an appointee for President Obama at the U.S. Trade and Development (USTDA). Prior to her appointee position, Ms. Afas worked in the public and private sectors in New York, London, Switzerland and Morocco. She has traveled extensively throughout the Middle East and North Africa advising clients on economic development and foreign direct investment promotion activities. Ms. Afas earned a Master's in International Economics from Columbia University and holds a B.A. in English and Political Science from James Madison University.